“Death’s Sad Summons”

On Friday afternoon at the Livingston cemetery in North Dickinson was laid to rest beneath the prairie and all that was mortal of Margaret Annie Ford Wilson, the beloved wife of John Wilson of Buckeye township. Hundreds of friends showed their love and esteem for her by their presence and deep sadness brooded over every heart at the passing away of one for whom life and the future seemed so bright. Rev. Dr. Blayney officiated at the services which were held at the home and very impressive were the words spoken above the loved form.

Mrs. Wilson was born August 15, 1869, in Knox county, Tennessee, and lived her short life with the exception of the few brief months in our midst in that place. She early became a Christian and her quiet cheerfulness in prosperity and patience in adversity proved the sincerity of her profession.

She was married to John Wilson Dec. 25, 1898 and died June 15, 1899. Her father died four months ago and her mother lives in the old Tennessee home, mourning the devoted daughter gone from earth. A sister, Mrs. J. W. Parker of Buckeye, lives in this county. To her and the bereaved husband goes out the sincere sympathy of many friends.
