

COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY
ORAL HISTORY RESTRICTIONS

July 29, 2003
(revised June 2011)

There are no longer photocopying restrictions on the Columbia University oral history transcripts. Researchers may photocopy entire interviews, if they so desire.

Permission to Cite or Quote

If you plan to use an interview in a published work or commercial production, you must secure our permission to cite or quote. In most cases, your publisher will ask you to secure such permissions. In order to do so, please submit to us the pages of the manuscript in which the interview is quoted, as well as the three preceding the quote and the three pages following. Please highlight the quotes from our collection and be sure to include the endnotes. We will check the citation and issue a letter of permission.

Please allow at least four weeks for this process.

The suggested form of citation is:

The Reminiscences of _____ (date of the interview), on p. _____ in the Columbia University Oral History Research Office Collection.

For commercial productions, please write us describing your project and the words you wish to use. Any use beyond standards of "fair use" may require a fee.
