Allied troops in Czechoslovakian territory: GCM re. the British position on the political advantages if British-U.S. troops liberate Prague and other parts of Czechoslovakia, his personal beliefs on this subject, DDE re. current operations in the Kiel-Lubeck-Linz area consuming all resources, an incursion into Czechoslovakia perhaps later, Russian forces being in better position for reaching Prague, his intention of directing no troop movement for political advantage unless ordered by Combined Chiefs of Staff; corres. re. strained relations with the French in connection with zones of occupation: DDE re. a map showing the territory requested by the French, his recommendations for areas to be included in the French Zone, a listing of military problems ahead if French plan adopted, GCM re. an exchange of messages between the President and de Gaulle and referencing DDE’s letter to de Gaulle about the Stuttgart situation, the contents of the President’s message re. French political ambitions and Allied unity, the text of de Gaulle’s answer to the President re. Allied treatment of the French; DDE re. the disposition of Allied Forces into national zones of occupation: the movement of British and U.S. troops to take place as soon as possible, the final plans for readjustments re. the 12th and 21st Army Groups being formulated, the impossibility of setting a firm date at present for completion of movements, the early institution of the Allied Control Council for Germany being highly desirable; corres. re. reassignment of officers to posts in the U.S.: GCM re. using vacancies occurring in various areas as a starting point for locating posts for distinguished officers, Collins, Haislip, and Walker under consideration for 8th Army Services Command, Keyes also a possibility, most area commanders to be replaced by returning officers, Stillwell’s urging the formal assignment of Lucas to 4th Army Command, Fredendall and several others to be replaced, DDE re. Walker as a good choice for the 8th Army Services Command, Gen. Young’s departure for the U.S. with a suggested schedule for returning groups of senior officers, his support for GCM’s plan to replace vacancies at home with officers of proven ability, his comments on the psychological effect on the Army and the public if less competent officers remain in present positions; corres. re. an exchange of medals with the Russians and honor awards for senior Allied officers: DDE re. reciprocal decorations for Russians at a commanders’ meeting of the 60th Div., U.S., and the 53rd Div., Russia, and at other high level meetings planned, a request for blanket authority to award Bronze Stars and Legions of Merit, DDE proposing an exception to the general practice and allowing the U.S. government to decorate selected Allied officers with Distinguished Service Medals: Tedder, Robb, Morgan, Gale, Strong, Whiteley, Montgomery, Harris, Coningham, Crerar, Dempsey, de Guingand, de Lattre de Tassigny, Alexander, and John Cunningham, a comment re. officers whose careers may have been adversely affected by staff assignments; corres. re. commendatory notes: GCM’s tribute to DDE on the completion of his mission, DDE’s appreciation for GCM’s unfailing support, DDE’s letter to Gen. Pershing recognizing his leadership after WWI in reorganizing the military educational service and the effect on the Army as evidenced in WWII]

CABLES (Daily P.R.D.) May-Nov. 1945 (1) [The materials in the six folders making up this series are the cables of information re. public opinions and political developments in the U.S. and Britain as reported by the news media. They were sent by the War Department to DDE daily from May 19 to November 21, 1945. See Marshall’s May 15 cable, W-82396, in Cables OFF (4) for background. The cables deal primarily with the problems of occupation and the transitioning from military to civilian governance.] TREATMENT OF DISPLACED PERSONS: priority of Jewish needs over German, shortages of food, fuel, and medicines in Central Europe prompting fears of an influenza-like pandemic, 6.5 million displaced persons being moved into Germany, Russia’s disagreement with Britain and U.S. over treatment of Polish-Baltic-Yugoslav displaced persons refusing to return to their home countries, the unresolved Palestine question; FRATERNIZATION POLICIES AND SOCIAL UNREST: the difficulties of enforcing policies, black market activities, sexual relations, the susceptibility of American soldiers and the American public to propaganda re. Russia, the breakdown of German family controls, the hostility of young German soldiers, the growing unrest in Occupied Germany, German children seen as a generation at risk; GERMAN ATTITUDE ADJUSTMENT: the long-term goal to train Germans to be peace-loving citizens with respect for international laws and justice, the difficulties of retraining minds after years of conditioning, the general perception of the Germans not acting like a defeated people; AFTERMATH OF POTS DAM RE. POLICIES, WEAKNESSES, AND PERCEPTIONS: the results of France’s non-inclusion in the Big Three meetings, the unattainability of the Unanimity Principle required for all policies of the Allied Control Council [ACC], the tensions among the Big Four resulting in four independent states rather than one unified organization, the critics finding fault with the governments behind the policies rather than the ACC, the importance of American-British recognition of the USSR as a major power, the French blockage of efforts to set up a central government in Germany until questions re. the Ruhr and the Rhineland settled, the eradication of all industries related to war production, the importance of rules involving economic controls being enforced by Allies and Germans alike, the identification and allocation of German assets, the recognition of the inability of German reparations to pay the war bills, the U.S. Catholic bishops’ charge re. the Allies ignoring both the Russian-imposed sovereignty on “puppet states” in the Balkans and the Atlantic Charter, speculations re. the outcome of the Allies’ economic experiment in Germany; NUREMBERG TRIALS: speculations as to the positive and negative effects of the trials, the U.S. role in preparations for the trials, the delayed starting date, the difficulties of reconciling U.S.-British criminal procedures with those of the French and Russian, the French threat to walk out if the Krupp name not placed on the indictment list, the precedent being set by the Court in opening up new territory in international law, the questions raised re. the guilt of military officers carrying out duties of military command, conjectures as to the effects of the trials on German attitudes, the perception of the Big Four being on trial as well; OCCUPATIONAL DUTIES, MILITARY GOVERNMENT, AND MORALE: the problems faced by soldiers now turned into occupiers-governors with no training for the new jobs, the need for competent civilians to train the Germans to govern themselves, the failure of the State Department to train those civilians needed, the long occupation period expected, the problems created by rapid demobilization in areas of security and personnel resulting in older, experienced officers and men being sent home, leaving the younger and inexperienced to take over the difficult jobs, the general view of a military floundering and decentralization turning into disorganization with no definite objectives set and a lack of agreement among the Allies, questions re. the long range goals of elimination of all Nazi influence, re-education of the German people, rehabilitation of a ruined economy, and reorganization of government along democratic lines, the implausible reconciliation of two contrary policies--stripping Germany of all industries of war-making potential but making the German economy self-sufficient, the wisdom of deploying military dependents to an impoverished country; UNRRA AND OTHER RELIEF MEASURES: UNRRA’s ability to do its job dependent on Congressional funding, the dangers ahead for Europe should Congress fail to appropriate the funds already authorized, a proposed shift of UNRRA supervision from the military to civilian relief groups, Lt. Gen. Frederick Morgan, UNRRA chief, re. the complex problems of feeding the millions of displaced persons, DDE re. the significance of Victory Loans as proof of America’s sense of world responsibility; DDE ON MILITARY CONCERNS: his support for Universal Military Training (UMT), his belief in the possibility of friendly relations with the USSR, his opinion re. America as first target in another war, reasons for his dislike of too swift demobilization, his prediction re. the strength of the British-American relationship in terms of future wars; MISCELLANEOUS SUBJECTS: the arrest of German bankers who financed the Nazis, the extent of German organization in the U.S. during the war, the replacement of top military brass by Eisenhower and Nimitz and the willingness of the American people to accept their advice and fund them, the Russian discovery of a young girl purported to be Hitler’s daughter, the crime wave sweeping across Europe, the need for a good civilian security system for Germany, Soviet lifting of censorship on outgoing news filed by foreign correspondents in Russia, the comparison of European starvation rates with those of the Thirty Years War of the 17th century, Moscow’s claim of 25 million homeless in Russia, British buildup of Germany as a buffer state against Russia, rumors of Stalin and a heart attack and Red officers discussing his successor, Churchill’s pessimism re. the bleak outlook of the future, German scientists on way to U.S., Pres. Harry S. Truman’s [HST] announcement of U.S. military rule in Germany to end in June but occupation to continue, Gallop Poll indicating about half of all Americans feel Germans getting off too easily, statement release from Allied Control Commission Intelligence re. details of Hitler’s death]

CABLES (Daily P.R.D.) May-Nov. 1945 (2) CRITIQUING AMERICAN POLICY IN GERMANY: factors contributing to the failure of the Occupation, the role of the American Army as a non-political entity in policing and governing, a lack of public understanding of DDE’s directive, inexperienced American civilians and officers challenging the rules set down for peace, the rise of anti-Semitism among American Occupation Forces, the questionable success of de-Nazification policies, Patton’s views on another war, DDE’s and [Gen. Lucius D.] Clay’s predictions re. the years needed to remake Germany, Clay re. the Potsdam Agreement as the controlling directive in occupation policy, general views of an American policy for standing up to Russia and a Russian policy for considering world opinions; BAVARIAN GOVERNMENT AND GEORGE PATTON: the dismissal of Freiderich Schaeffer, the ex-Nazi Minister-President of Bavaria, by Patton acting under DDE’s orders, Patton’s relief from command related to his de-Nazification views, Gen. [Lucian K.] Truscott to take command of 3rd Army and Patton to command 15th Army, Patton’s removal underlining requirement for all officers to carry out official rules, the Patton incident speeding up de-Nazification process, the Patton attitude common among officers re. Occupation policies and rebuilding German industry, the pre-war business connections with Germany of Brig. Gen. [William H.] Draper, Col. Boyd, deputy Ellis S. Hoaglund, and Rufus J. Mysor, DDE’s actions reinforcing the U.S. policy of zero toleration for weakness in dealing with Nazis and the eradication of Nazism, praise for DDE’s handling of Patton affair, Congressional attitudes re. the Patton transfer, general comments re. the success of professional military men as civilian administrators, Bavarian problems exacerbated by use of Nazi-influenced government employees and reliance on dealing through interpreters, elections indicating German politics moving to left, the restoration of a free press in Bavaria, underground activities in Bavaria involving reprisals against German women for fraternizing with U.S. soldiers and armed bands of marauders carrying off crops in rural areas; SOCIAL CONCERNS INVOLVING FOOD SUPPLIES, DISEASE, CRIME, PROPAGANDA, AND FRATERNIZATION: death rates in Berlin among children under ten and adults over 60, major causes of death for both groups, fears of typhoid and paratyphoid epidemics, British removal of 50,000 children from Berlin, onset of winter intensifying problems, immediate relief for liberated nations favored by Congressional majority, European awareness of dangers to world stability, refugee food supplies being cut to feed Germans, Gen. Montgomery’s views re. food and medical needs, the emphasis in Germany on improving the diet of displaced persons, controversy re. food for Germany vs. other European countries, Potsdam specifications re. German dietary standards and the destruction of German industry raising fears for the future across Europe, America’s share of the cost of food shipments, widespread belief in involvement of Nazis and underworld elements in criminal police forces in Berlin, German arrogance on rise along with signs of organized resistance from underground units of Hitler Youth and former POWs, multiplying problems re. incidents between former German soldiers and American occupation troops, the news shock to Americans believing the war to be over, suggestions for DDE being given more troops for occupation duty and stricter enforcement policies, the general opinion increasing among Americans of U.S. officers and men being taken in by German propaganda, the removal of fraternization bans creating a sympathetic attitude among GIs toward Germans, serious cases being reported of American officers involved in black market activities, German citizens in the American Zone being assaulted by armed bands of thugs, new currency exchange regulations to tighten controls over black market activities, rumors re. U.S. authorities turning over to Russians the plates used for printing German Occupation marks, Allied Intelligence reports of gunplay, sabotage, and the spread of black market operations in German POW camps in France, general comments re. events reflecting effects of the bankrupt conditions in Germany both economically and intellectually; CONDITIONS IN JEWISH AND OTHER DP CAMPS AND RELATED CONCERNS: the Harrison Report re. conditions in the DP camps in the U.S. Zone and characterizing the U.S. treatment of Jews as equivalent to that of the Nazis, DDE’s censure of the Harrison Report, his observations re. the treatment received in DP camps, the problems being faced by American Occupation Forces, and the number of lives being saved, the Jewish response to the Harrison Report, findings re. camp conditions as reported by Judge Simon Rifkind, Red Cross Commissioner Henry Gibson, and various newspaper correspondents visiting the camps, the persistent questions re. the length of time being spent in camps by all DPs and military POWs and the responsibility of the German people under the Potsdam principles, DDE’s call upon the Allies to assure Germany’s subsistence on all levels, reports re. Jews registering as Germans to remain in the country and Polish Jews, returned to Poland after the surrender, now fleeing back to the U.S. Zone, the release of letters re. the extent of Soviet brutality and terrorism toward those repatriating to Russia, articles supporting DDE’s handling of the various situations and the American public’s continuing trust in him; AMERICAN ZONE POLITICS AND POLICIES: DDE’s difficulties in carrying out the President’s orders due to a bankrupt German economy compounded by four Zone divisions and conflicting Allied policies, DDE’s need for a broad policy backed by Congress and the American public as opposed to the current policy of expediency, a growing concern based on the Harrison Report and the Patton affair of DDE’s being out of touch with conditions, DDE’s urging the switch from military to civilian government in all Zones by June 1, American Zone policies barring Nazis from voting, holding political office or managerial positions, or having control or ownership of a German business, current reports re. the numbers of Nazis jailed and those ousted from office in the American Zone, a German rating of the quality of the four zones and the opinion held of American GIs, controversy over Germany’s economic future involving the Potsdam plan for destruction of the industrial base vs. the recommendations of a committee of American businessmen for expansion, questions of bias being raised re. the attitudes of Robert Murphy and a number of American officers and American businessmen re. their pre-war trading relations with Germany, the Army Commission’s confirmation of Germany’s inability to support itself under current arrangements, American destruction of Farben plants in the U.S. Zone, reports re. the percentage of German industry intact or capable of rapid repair, warnings recalling the aftermath of WWI and the reparations exacted in light of current policies, the atomic bomb threat, opinions re. America as the prime target in a future war, the American Air Force Command’s intention to control Germany through the Strategic Air Force rather than with a large army of occupation and Allied disagreements with the American position; ALLIED CONTROL COUNCIL: the issuance of a 48-Point Proclamation to the German people specifying Allied intentions, the inability of the U.S. and Russia to agree on policies and the perception of Americans over-compromising with the Russians, talk of scrapping the Potsdam peace machinery, Gen. Clay re. the progress being made in working out 4-Power rule, French vetoes blocking establishment of a unified system of administration, major achievements re. restoration of rail service under civilian control in all four Zones and abolition of the Nazi judicial system, controversy over the German Communist Party’s proposal to internationalize mining and heavy industry in the British-controlled Ruhr and Rhineland, de Gaulle’s attempts to move both areas into the French sphere of influence, the issue of unions and guaranteed voting rights causing a split in the ACC, Russian demands for the Opel Motor Works and other industrial plants as reparations, Austria’s demand for the return of South Tyrol from Italy, DDE’s task to create a common policy for Germany among the four Powers, controversy re. the importance of German industrial exports for food and Occupation support vs. the Potsdam requirements for a non-industrialized Germany, ACC seizure of the I. G. Farben empire, implementation of a new Bill of Rights for all Germany, Russian demands for an end to anti-Sovietism, the inability of the Allies to get along in Berlin inhibiting the solving of larger problems, the withdrawal of American forces weakening DDE’s position re. working with the Allies, Marshal Zhukov’s legislative powers in the Russian Zone in contrast to those of the leaders in the other Zones, the major concern of the U.S. to ensure Germany’s inability to make war again, growing fears of the failure of the ACC strengthened by the collapse of the Big Five meeting in London and public apathy re. the problems in Germany, the ACC’s reform of the German judicial system based on the Anglo-Saxon model seen as having most lasting effect; NUREMBERG TRIALS: preliminary conferences on trial procedures, questions re. the inclusion of industrialists and bankers with military figures as war criminals, the indictment of Rudolf Hess, the use of Franz Wiedeman as a star witness, and the suicide of Dr. Robert Ley, the formal indictments of individuals and groups, the necessity for seating an International Forum to deal with the question of aggression, the purpose and provisions of the Kellogg-Briand Pact, the intention of the Nuremberg Trials re. that Pact, the important principles to be defined by the International Court, the Japanese trials to follow similar procedures, Justice Jackson being credited for the concept of the trial and pushing it through; U.S. MILITARY CONCERNS AT HOME: GCM’s Biennial Report stressing reasons for maintaining a strong Army, urging the adoption of UMT, and identifying the Army’s role in moving Germany forward, Congressional conflict over UMT, Admiral [Ernest J.] King’s opposition to Army-Navy unification, GCM re. the duty of the U.S. to help enforce world peace, Secretary of War Patterson re. creation of a single Department of Defense, a Congressional investigation into the Pearl Harbor attack; TENSIONS IN EUROPE GENERALLY: Poland’s political struggles with Moscow-trained Communists, Russian tactics in southeastern Europe raising international distrust, German Communist Party control in Berlin, rising hostility in France over behavior of American GI’s, Poles killing Germans in retaliation for war atrocities, rumors of Zhukov’s acceptability as new leader if regime changes in Russia, failure of Big 5 meeting in London fueling questions re. Russia as an isolated power rather than as a partner in an international organization, George Patton’s belief in the certainty of another war and Russian agreement with him, recognition of the Austrian government submitted to the ACC, Russians claiming large portions of Austria, de facto existence of a Russian Zone of Interest in Rumania-Bulgaria-Hungary and an Anglo-American sphere in Italy, awareness of these political factions among conquered populations; POTS DAM FALLOUT: controversies growing over implementation of the Potsdam Agreement for dismantling the German industrial base, the importance of Brig. Gen. [William H.] Draper in determining the future of German businesses, the future of Europe dependent on decisions being made re. German self-reliance, major questions involving fuel and transportation, getting the Ruhr coal mines back in production, the effects of Russian control of Eastern Germany on agriculture and food supplies, establishing the priority areas for production, the necessity for German industry to produce surplus goods for trade, the possibility of a future war if German industry restored, American concerns re. Germany as a continuing burden, creating a workable policy for Germany; MISCELLANEOUS SUBJECTS: files of more than 8 million Nazi party members found, Russian-related topics including use of Radio Berlin to glorify Russia and a Zhukov trip to U.S. being planned, German scientists volunteering to aid U.S. in military research, all Axis POWs in U.S. to be sent home by spring, a proposal to solve Occupation problems with a hired army recruited for that purpose, redeployment process slowed by removal of British liners from service and the refitting of several ships to transport Rothschild family horses to U.S., the continuing threat of large financial interests in neutral countries still held by Germans, French-related topics including a camp in France used by U.S. to re-educate Hitler Youth, American removal of 80,000 starving German POWs from French camps, and French voters’ endorsement of de Gaulle’s plans to abandon the 3rd Republic, draft a new constitution, and establish the 4th Republic, seizure by American troops in Japan of millions in bullion and other valuables including radium stolen from Czechoslovakia, war criminals Quisling executed in Norway and Hess removed to Nuremberg, GI’s sending large amounts of money home to avoid November deadline on money transfers, Patton re. his ill-fated rescue attempt of a POW camp and his son-in-law, Margaret Bourke White’s interview with Alfred Krupp re. his use of slave labor in munitions factories, America’s “luck” in having DDE in Europe and MacArthur in Japan to carry out U.S. policy, HST re. another war destroying civilization, questions re. details of Hitler’s death, Berliner’s lining up for old American films, and editorials at home and abroad comparing poor leadership in U.S. and American emotional immaturity with the superior quality of America’s military leaders abroad]
